TIDBITS® LEARNS THAT GRASS IS NOT JUST FOR MOWING

by Patricia L. Cook

This Tidbits examines grasses around the world. There are many varieties of grasses found from the freezing North and South Poles to many deserts and the lands along the sultry hot equator.

- Grasses belong in the plant family botanists call Poaceae. Grasses are considered flowering plants, but the flowers are not showy as they are on, for example, roses and sunflowers. This lack of showiness is due to the fact that grasses are wind pollinated and not pollinated by insects. The colorful blooms of most flowering plants are needed to attract pollinating insects.
- The grass family is very large, containing an estimated 10,000 species worldwide. Over 1,000 species occur in North America.
- Grasses range widely in shape and size, ranging from golf course turf and lawn grass to wheat, corn, rice, sugarcane and bamboo.
- Grasses can be as short as the greens on a golf course and as tall as bamboo that can reach heights of 120 feet (40 m). Golfers around the world are thankful for the manicured greens that allow putts to roll precisely as intended. Pandas are thankful for the large bamboo forests they depend on for their sustenance. Talk about picky eaters: Bamboo is all they will eat!

Now here's a tip! by Jo Ann Derson
 (c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

- To soothe minor burns in the kitchen, use the cut side of a raw potato pressed into the burn area for a minute or two.
- "Personal appliances can get very dirty and can harbor many species of bacteria. One of the worst, in my opinion, is the cellphone. Make sure you clean it regularly by wiping front and back surfaces with a soft cloth dampened with alcohol. We touch our phones with our hands, and press them into our faces. It's just smart to keep them clean." -- W.D. in Indiana
- Grilling season is in full swing. A great way to clean the grill surface is by using a wad of aluminum foil. It can be pressed into the grate to get all the gunk off, both before or after grilling.
- "I love my windowbox planters, but I would always get dirt splashed on my windows or the sill when it rained. My friend advised me to put a shallow layer of small gravel over the dirt. It looks nice and there is no splatter after watering or rain." ð R.L. in Washington
- To remove sticky residue from photo frames, try hairspray. Spray on, let sit for just a minute, then wipe off.
- "When you have small children, always hang a hand towel over the door of the bathroom so they can't lock themselves in and get scalded with hot water." -- J.R. in Virginia

- All of our cereal grains belong to the grass family, including wheat, rice, wild rice, corn, oats, barley, millet and rye.
- Some grasses can survive in very inhospitable places, from the tundra in the extreme north to the shifting sands in the harshest deserts and even where salt water is present.
- Grasses were prevalent across the Great Plains of North America and proved instrumental in making the region a great cattle-grazing area. Since about 1880, much of the native grasslands have been dissected by agriculture. One of the last remnants of this vast grassland area untainted by agriculture is the Flint Hills region in eastern Kansas. Ecologists refer to this ecosystem as tallgrass prairie, and preservation of a piece of it is assured in the Tallgrass Prairie National Preserve near Strong City, Kansas.
- Grains are one of the four primary food groups identified in the nutritional guidelines posted by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The recommended daily grain intake for adults is 5-8 ounces (141.7-226.8 g) with at least half of this intake being whole and not refined grain. The USDA website, www.choosemyplate.gov, has good information on this subject.
- The connection between grains, carbohydrates and obesity is a hot topic of discussion among nutrition experts in the United States. The Grains Food Foundation (GFF) notes that whole grains are important sources of iron, a nutrient critical to production and release of energy in the body. The GFF further notes that the three nutrients selenium, potassium and magnesium found in whole grain foods collectively may help boost immunity, lower blood pressure and prevent heart disease and some forms of cancer.
- Exotic grasses introduced into an area where they are not native can sometimes set the stage for an ecological disaster. Cheatgrass that is native to the Mediterranean region of Europe was first observed in North America near Denver, Colorado, in the late 1800s. Allegedly, it entered as a contaminant of agricultural seed. This grass is now a troublesome pest across much of arid western North America and rated by the USDA as a highly invasive species.
- Not only is bamboo food for pandas, it is a versatile construction material. Its uses include flooring, fencing, decking, support poles, paneling, edging and conduits (piping) to transport water.

Party Favors Hide Dinosaurs Inside

Every preschooler I know loves outdoor summer fun, birthday parties and anything to do with dinosaurs. Put that combination together, and it's likely that a dinosaur-themed party will be somewhere in your parenting repertoire during the early years. So save this recipe and use it when it's time to create sandy triceratops party favors. These surprises inspired by another place in time are something the kids will never forget. If there are older kids in the family who have already earned their degree in the dino phase, let them get their hands in the mix and help you prepare this sand-goop recipe to make triceratops party favors for their younger brother's or sister's party. Once this sand clay is off the stove and has cooled (yes, you'll be cooking sand!), mold it around plastic eggs containing little plastic or rubber dinosaurs. If you don't have plastic eggs, mold the sand clay around the toys to form a ball. Anyway you do it, let them dry a few days until hard. On the day of your party, pass one out to each child, or hide them in your yard for guests to find in a treasure hunt. Invite them all to follow you to the sidewalk. Tell them to tap-tap-tap their eggs against the concrete. The eggs will break after a few tentative hits, and voila! Your party guests have just hatched a slew of baby dinos into the world! Perfect for a "birthday" favor.

SAND CLAY RECIPE
 Put 1 cup clean sand, 1/2 cup cornstarch, 1 1/2 teaspoons powdered alum (in the spice section of your market) and 1/2 cup water in an old cooking pot. Stir with hands or a spoon. An adult should then place the pot on the stove, turn heat to medium and continue stirring with a spoon. As it becomes warm, it will begin to liquefy. Continue to stir for 2-3 minutes until clay thickens. Remove from heat and spoon mixture onto cutting board. Let cool. Make above-mentioned party-favor eggs or enjoy molding the clay into shapes and characters. There are probably as many ideas as there are grains of sand between your fingers!

Chocolate-Almond Strawberries

If you love strawberries as much as I do, then you've been watching the patch as steadfastly as I have (and it really doesn't matter if your "patch" is in your backyard or at your grocery store). Strawberries With Chocolate-Almond Cream Sauce is the current "most favorite" strawberry recipe for you to try.

4 cups sliced fresh strawberries
 1 (4-serving) package sugar-free instant chocolate fudge pudding mix
 2/3 cup nonfat dry milk powder
 1 1/2 cups water
 1/2 cup reduced-calorie whipped topping
 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
 1 tablespoon mini-chocolate chips
 1 tablespoon slivered almonds

1. Spoon 1 cup sliced strawberries into 4 dessert dishes. In a large bowl, combine dry pudding mix, dry milk powder and water. Mix well, using a wire whisk. Blend in whipped topping and almond extract. Evenly spoon about 1/2 cup pudding mixture over strawberries in each dish.
 2. In a small bowl, combine chocolate chips and almonds. Evenly sprinkle 1 1/2 teaspoons chips mixture over top of each. Refrigerate for at least 15 minutes. Serves 4.

• Each serving equals: About 158 calories, 2g fat, 6g protein, 29g carb., 398mg sodium, 2g fiber; Diabetic Exchanges: 1 Fruit, 1/2 Fat-Free Milk, 1/2 Starch.

- Bamboo is also becoming known in the bicycle world as a raw material for bicycle frames. Bamboosero is a company dedicated to using bamboo to construct bicycle frames in developing countries. Bamboo is an excellent choice for frames due to its strength and flexibility. Also, bamboo is plentiful in many developing countries, and building bicycles provides needed employment to produce a useful product. Visit www.bamboosero.com to learn more.
- Native peoples in North America and Africa used grasses and other plants as the fibrous material for weaving baskets. In the low country of South Carolina, descendants of West African slaves continue the traditions of basket weaving using sweet grass that is common to coastal South Carolina. Native Americans in California are believed to have managed vegetation using periodic land fires to remove unwanted plant litter, trees and shrubs from stands of deergrass, a grass prized in basket weaving.
- If you own or spend time around dogs you have probably observed them eating grass. Why do dogs eat grass? It's a question that has plagued veterinarians for years, and there is no universally accepted answer. Some possible answers are that dogs simply like the taste of grass or that grass serves as a laxative by adding fiber to the dog's diet. Veterinarians are generally unified in the belief that grass, untainted by pesticides, is not harmful to dogs.
- Two of the most important services rendered by grasses are those of a soil builder and a soil conservation agent. Oats, rye and ryegrass are often used as green manure and cover crops. A green manure crop is one that is grown and subsequently plowed under to build the soil. A cover crop is grown and left in place to flourish and prevent or reduce soil erosion.

- These days you'll rarely see an elected official with a beard, but facial hair wasn't always considered to be a liability in politics. In fact, it's been reported that Abraham Lincoln was inspired to grow a beard while he was running for president in 1860 because of a letter from an 11-year-old girl. Grace Bedell wrote to Lincoln that a beard would make him "look a great deal better, for your face is so thin. All the ladies like whiskers."

What IS That?

"Dream Mine"
 located east of Salem, Utah

In Aug 1894, John H. Koyle experienced a dream in which he was visited by a figure from another world. The visitor showed Koyle an ancient "Nephite" mine. The rooms contained treasure of an extinct civilization. Koyle was instructed to open a mine and extract gold for the welfare of "his" people. Specific instructions were given for the mine development. The riches would be found and released during a time of world crisis. The name "Relief Mine" was attached to the project. In 1909 the Koyle Mining Company was formed with 114,000 shares of stock issued at $1.00 per share.

Koyle's dreams continued. He predicted the First World War and the economic crash of October, 1929. He foresaw "horseless carriages" bigger than railroad cars going down the road at great speeds. John H. Koyle died 17 May 1949 in Payson.

The mine continued in fits and starts under the leadership of Quayle Dixon for another twenty-three years. In 1961, a new company, The Relief Mine Company, succeeded the Koyle Mining Company.

Grasses have been researched and used as agents to clean up former industrial sites with contaminated soil. Specialists working with and refining this technology refer to it as phytoremediation. Generally, soil pollutants are either taken up by plants and the plants harvested and treated to render the pollutant-laden plant material harmless, or the pollutants are degraded to something harmless in the plants' root zone. The U. S. Environmental Protection Agency recognizes this technology as viable in some environmental cleanup situations.

Citronella is a fragrant grass found in southeastern Asia. It is the source of citronella oil used in soaps, medicines and perfumes.

Now that you know more about grasses and the important roles they play in our lives, maybe you won't grumble so much when it comes time to mow the lawn!

FAMOUS LANDMARKS OF THE WORLD:
 MOUNT RUSHMORE

Many monuments exist that honor early leaders of the United States. Most of those are on the East Coast where significant political and historical events took place. Mount Rushmore is located in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Doane Robinson, state historian for South Dakota, came up with the idea for a tourist attraction to bring people to his state. He imagined a memorial to famous Americans in the western United States. He is known as the "Father of Mount Rushmore."

Robinson contacted Gutzon Borglum, a master sculptor, and shared his idea for carving large figures in the Black Hills. Borglum was, at the time, working as the first sculptor on Stone Mountain near Atlanta, Georgia. His original work on Stone Mountain was actually totally blasted from the mountain, and that project was finished by others. (He left Stone Mountain because of funding disputes.) He took his talents to Mount Rushmore and became a part of history with the famous work.

Borglum, originally from Idaho, began his art studies at the age of 17. He studied art in California and France. The first American sculpture ever bought for New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art was Borglum's Mares of Diomedes. His most famous artwork became the famous heads on the side of the mountains in South Dakota.

When Borglum and Robinson discussed the sculpture work for the Black Hills, Robinson wanted to memorialize America's Western heroes like Buffalo Bill Cody. Borglum convinced him to make the memorial for all of the country. They chose four presidents who stood for freedom and democracy.

The presidents chosen for Mount Rushmore represent the first 150 years of American history. The presidents and their completion dates are: George Washington, 1934; Thomas Jefferson, 1936; Abraham Lincoln, 1937; and Theodore Roosevelt, 1939.

 THE HISTORY CHANNEL

On June 29, 1613, the Globe Theater, where most of Shakespeare's plays debuted, burns down. The Globe was built in 1599 from the timbers of London's very first permanent theater, Burbage's Theater. The galleries could seat about 1,000 people, with room for another 2,000 "groundlings," who could stand around the stage.

On June 28, 1888, writer Robert Louis Stevenson and his family leave San Francisco for their first visit to the South Seas. Stevenson, an adventurous traveler plagued by tuberculosis, was seeking a healthier climate. His novel "Treasure Island" was published in 1883.

On June 27, 1922, the American Library Association awards the first Newbery Medal, honoring the year's best children's book, to "The Story of Mankind" by Hendrik Willem van Loon. The Newbery Medal seeks to encourage originality and excellence in the field of children's books.

On June 26, 1948, in response to the Soviet blockade of land routes into West Berlin, the United States begins a massive airlift of food, water and medicine to the citizens of the besieged city. For nearly a year, supplies from American planes sustained the more than 2 million people in West Berlin.

On June 25, 1956, the last Packard rolls off the production line at Packard's plant in Detroit. The classic American luxury car used the famously enigmatic slogan "Ask the Man Who Owns One."

On June 30, 1962, Sandy Koufax strikes out 13 batters and walks five to lead the Brooklyn Dodgers over the New York Mets 5-0 with his first career no-hitter. Koufax went on to throw three more no-hitters, including a perfect game on Sept. 9, 1965, in which he allowed no hits and no walks.

On July 1, 1979, the Sony Walkman -- the world's first low-cost, portable music player -- goes on sale in Japan. The initial production run of 30,000 units looked to be too ambitious, as only 3,000 were sold at $150 apiece in the first month. Some 200 million sales later, Sony retired the cassette Walkman in 2010.

Do Pets Really Need Vaccinations?

By Samantha Mazzotta

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: A friend of mine told me that annual vaccinations for my cat and two dogs were unnecessary and a total scam. He said I only have to vaccinate them every three years and that veterinarians are just part of a big racket. What do you think? -- Janine H., Knoxville, Tenn.

DEAR JANINE: I think you should talk to your pets' veterinarian before making a decision that could negatively affect their health, and maybe yours.

Vaccinations don't just protect pets against rabies. They also receive vaccinations, particularly as puppies and kittens, for distemper, feline leukemia, parvovirus and a number of other serious and potentially fatal diseases.

There are diseases that can also pass between pets and humans, and vaccinations can prevent them.

"Pets can easily contract Giardia and Leptospirosis from standing water or damp grass," said Dr. Meg Connelly of the Willard Veterinary Clinic in Quincy, Mass. "Many dogs love swimming in water, sniffing around in the mud or rolling in the wet grass. Unfortunately, without immunization protection, these pets are at risk for contracting a serious or even fatal illness that can easily be spread to humans."

Keeping shots up to date is one of the best ways to prevent both your pets and you from becoming ill. And even though they seem pricey up front, they are nothing compared to the cost of medical care if a pet should become ill from a disease it could have been vaccinated against.

Again, talk to your pets' vet about which shots they need regularly and when they need to get them. If cost is a factor, many cities and towns sponsor low- or no-cost vaccination clinics that will get pets up to date with their shots for a reasonable price.

TIDBITS NUGGET OF KNOWLEDGE

An unusual plant that grows in Australia and Tasmania is the "grass tree." It looks like a tree trunk with grass growing on top. The trunk grows slowly, averaging about a foot (30.5 cm) every 30 years. Wildfires enhance growth, and the plants usually live for several centuries. Australian aborigines used the nectar of grass tree flowers to make drinks and ate the leaves, stems and roots. The resin has been used for glue and varnish.

Jambalaya Sausage Kebabs

This bayou blast offers up smoky, savory flavor -- stacked with kielbasa, veggies and Cajun-spiced rice. Precooked sausage helps you get the meal on the table in about 30 minutes.

- 8 (12-inch) wooden skewers or 4 long metal skewers
- 2 small (about 6 ounces each) zucchini, cut diagonally into 3/4-inch-thick slices
- 1 red pepper, cut into 1 1/4-inch pieces
- 1/2 small Vidalia onion, cut into 4 wedges, keeping wedges intact
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 teaspoon olive oil
- 2 teaspoons Cajun seasoning
- 1 package (16 ounces) light kielbasa or other fully cooked smoked sausage, cut diagonally into 1-inch chunks
- 1 large stalk celery, chopped
- 1 package (8.8 ounces) white rice, fully cooked
- 1 medium tomato, chopped
- 2 tablespoons water

1. Prepare outdoor grill for covered direct grilling over medium heat. Meanwhile, soak wooden skewers in water 15 minutes.
2. In large bowl, toss zucchini, pepper, onion, 1 tablespoon oil, and 1 teaspoon Cajun seasoning. Alternately thread vegetables and kielbasa onto skewers.
3. Place skewers on hot grill rack. Cover grill and cook 10 to 12 minutes or until kielbasa browns and vegetables are tender-crisp, turning skewers occasionally. Remove skewers to platter; keep warm.
4. In nonstick 10-inch skillet, heat remaining 1 teaspoon oil over medium heat. Add celery and remaining 1 teaspoon Cajun seasoning. Cook, covered, 5 minutes or until celery softens, stirring occasionally. Stir in rice, tomato and water. Cover and cook 3 minutes or until rice is hot. Serve rice with kebabs.

• Each serving without rice: About 320 calories, 18g protein, 9g carbohydrate, 26g total fat (8g saturated), 2g fiber, 76mg cholesterol, 1,160mg sodium.

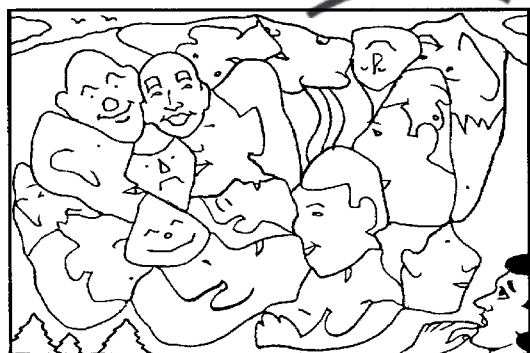

• Each serving rice: About 85 calories, 2g protein, 17g carbohydrate, 1g total fat (0g saturated), 1g fiber, 0mg cholesterol, 150mg sodium.

- Mount Rushmore was worked on by 400 men and women from October 1927 to October 1941. Of the workers, about 140 worked on the mountain; the others built roads, cared for tools and helped in other ways.
- Dynamite was used for 90 percent of the carving; about 450,000 tons (408 million kg) of rock was blasted away to create the artistic renderings.
- Workers had to sit on "swing" seats hanging from cables to drill into the stone. Many had to climb over 500 steps daily to reach the top. Even with all of the dangerous possibilities, few were hurt and none died on the project.
- Borglum died in 1941 before Mount Rushmore was finished. His son, Lincoln, took over the work. Work stopped on the sculptures on October 31, 1941. When the United States entered World War II, there was no more money for the monument.
- Mount Rushmore stands the same today as it did in 1941. It was cleaned in 2005, the first time in its history. According to the National Park Service, "Geologists estimate that the granite at Mount Rushmore National Memorial will erode only 1 inch (2.5 cm) every 10,000 years."
- For years, Scout Troops have been invited to participate in flag-folding ceremonies at Mount Rushmore. For 2012, military personnel and veterans from the audience are being invited to participate. The area receives approximately 3 million visitors annually.

MOTORCYCLES

Motorcycles are not for hauling families like cars but provide individual riders with transportation that is both economical and fun.

- Most motorcycle riders have dusted off their bikes and ridden many miles by the time June rolls around. Not great for winters, especially in cold climates, motorcycles are a vehicle of choice for riders in summer.
- The predecessors to motorcycles and motor scooters were called "safety" bicycles. Safety bicycles were so named because they came about to replace the high-wheeled bikes that were so dangerous in the 1800s. The newer bikes had tires of the same or close to the same size so they were easier to mount and dismount.

Do Pets Really Need Vaccinations?

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: A friend of mine told me that annual vaccinations for my cat and two dogs were unnecessary and a total scam. He said I only have to vaccinate them every three years and that veterinarians are just part of a big racket. What do you think? - Janine H., Knoxville, Tenn.

DEAR JANINE: I think you should talk to your pets' veterinarian before making a decision that could negatively affect their health, and maybe yours. Vaccinations don't just protect pets against rabies. They also receive vaccinations, particularly as puppies and kittens, for distemper, feline leukemia, parvovirus and a number of other serious and potentially fatal diseases. There are diseases that can also pass between pets and humans, and vaccinations can prevent them. "Pets can easily contract Giardia and Leptospirosis from standing water or damp grass," said Dr. Meg Connelly of the Willard Veterinary Clinic in Quincy, Mass. "Many dogs love swimming in water, sniffing around in the mud or rolling in the wet grass. Unfortunately, without immunization protection, these pets are at risk for contracting a serious or even fatal illness that can easily be spread to humans." Keeping shots up to date is one of the best ways to prevent both your pets and you from becoming ill. And even though they seem pricey up front, they are nothing compared to the cost of medical care if a pet should become ill from a disease it could have been vaccinated against. Again, talk to your pets' vet about which shots they need regularly and when they need to get them. If cost is a factor, many cities and towns sponsor low- or no-cost vaccination clinics that will get pets up to date with their shots for a reasonable price.

MOTORCYCLES (continued)

- Inventor Sylvester H. Roper built a steam velocipede in 1867. (Velocipede was the name given to early bicycles and tricycles.) His invention was the earliest known motorcycle, with an ability to carry enough coal to ride 25 miles. While he didn't find commercial success or fame, his invention inspired others in developing motorcycles.
- According to a biography of Roper, he died of a heart attack while demonstrating his steam bicycle's speed and endurance during a trial run in Worcester County, Massachusetts.
- In Europe, it wasn't long after the safety bicycle was invented that someone decided to attach a motor. Gottlieb Daimler is credited with building the first motorized bicycle, soon called a motorcycle, in 1885. Daimler's bikes were made of wood and came to be known as "boneshakers," because of the roughness of the ride.
- In 1892, Alex Millet came up with a safety bicycle design that was a smoother ride with pneumatic tires and a five-cylinder rotary engine that was built into the rear wheel.
- The first powered two-wheeled vehicles that were patented and produced successfully in numbers were built by Hildebrand & Wolfmuehler in Munich, Germany, in 1894. Hildebrand & Wolfmuehler made more than 200 vehicles that used a twin cylinder water-cooled engine and a step-through frame.
- In 1895, the French company DeDion-Buton revolutionized the motorcycle industry with its four-stroke engine that was capable of generating half a horsepower. The engine drew attention from motorcycle manufacturers worldwide. The company was able to mass produce the engines.
- Two American motorcycle companies that copied and used the design of the DeDion-Buton engine for their machines were Harley-Davidson and Indian.
- With the help of a German co-worker, Arthur and Walter Davidson and William Harley started one of the most recognizable motorcycle companies in the world today. In 1905, the "Silent Gray Fellow," was the first Harley-Davidson sold in significant numbers. To slow or stop, the rider had to peddle backwards! Today, over 100 years later, Harley-Davidsons remain popular.
- Indian Motorcycles started off as the Hendee Manufacturing Company in 1901. The founder, George Hendee, named the "motocycles," (notice there is no "r"), Indian to signify they were American products. The Indian company closed in 1954, and after many years and complicated legal problems, a new company began selling the brand again in 1999.
- The two companies continue to compete for owners and awards. Both are very much alive and well with dedicated riders.

De-Cluttering For Mental Health

Q: My husband has claimed pretty much the entire garage with his workshop, tools and lawn-care equipment. A lot of it is necessary, but he just keeps collecting stuff. He's got at least three of the same screwdrivers and wrenches, and endless jars of old screws, nails and fasteners. I'd love to be able to park one of our cars in there. Or at least, you know, walk around without tripping over stuff. How can I get him to clean out the place without starting a feud?
 – Carol T., Providence, R.I.

A: Getting your husband to neaten up what's become his man-cave can be a real chore. He probably sees as necessary what you see as extraneous: those extra sets of tools have a purpose, at least in his mind. Talk directly to him about it -- the trick being not to accuse, nag or cajole him. He may not be very receptive to your request that he give you enough space to park the car in the garage, but tell him that's what you want. Don't build it into an argument; he's likely to just dig his heels in and not budge at all. Instead, try to get him to talk about what he'd really like to do with the space. It's hard to work in a messy workshop; did he have any projects planned that he hasn't yet started? Does he really just want a place to get away for a few hours? Find out what he wants, and see if you can work from there. One option you might bring up is that the extra tool sets and other unneeded items can be sold by throwing a yard sale or putting them up online on a sales or auction site. The profit can be used to buy an item for the workshop, like a power tool, a refrigerator or an old couch.

HOME TIP: A tackle box is one way to store different sizes and types of fasteners like bolts, nuts, washers, and so on. It's portable and allows for quick access to the items you need to complete a repair.

Send your questions or tips to ask@thisisahammer.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Mow only dry grass; wet turf is slippery and clogs the mower. Remove children and pets from the yard; they can dart in front of the mower, create distractions or cause you to trip. Never pull the mower toward you. Leave all safety guards in place; removing shields may allow debris to fly out of the mower or feet to slip under the deck.
