TIDBITS® BRINGS YOU SOME IRISH INFO
by Kathy Wolfe

This week, Tidbits has lots of information about the Irish, everything from St. Patrick to Notre Dame. Celebrate St. Paddy's Day by learning some interesting facts about the Emerald Isle.

- The man has a day named after him, but who exactly was St. Patrick? Strangely enough, his name wasn't Patrick, and he wasn't born in Ireland, but rather in Scotland! Maewyn Succat was born in the late fourth century to a wealthy family, but at the age of 16, he was kidnapped from the family estate by a group of Irish raiders and sold into slavery. During his six years of captivity, he was a shepherd, and experienced a conversion to Christianity. According to folklore, a voice came to him urging him to escape, which he did, aboard a pirate ship. Yet the voice further counseled him to return to Ireland as a missionary to convert the Irish to Christianity.
- After 15 years of study for the priesthood, during which time Succat took on the name Patricius, he began his 29-year-long mission in Ireland. Ancient legend tells of Patrick standing on a hilltop holding up his wooden staff, banishing all the snakes from Ireland. Because there were no snakes in Ireland, it's believed this was merely symbolic of Patrick driving out the evil and pagan philosophies.

- Patrick wasn't made a saint until the early 17th century, hundreds of years after his death in the year 461. March 17 is the anniversary of his death and is his religious feast day.
- Although we think of the color green when St. Patrick is mentioned, blue was the first color to represent the hero. In 1783, The Order of St. Patrick was founded, the senior order of chivalry and fellowship of knights. The Order of the Thistle already used green for their uniforms and the Order of the Garter used dark blue, so the Order of St. Patrick used a shade of sky blue. Military uniforms were of "St. Patrick's Blue" and during the time of King Henry VIII, and the flag of Ireland was a gold harp on a blue background. The harp remains as the country's national emblem today.
- Between 1846 and 1900, about 2,873,000 people emigrated from Ireland to America, making it the second largest nationality group of immigrants, second only to Germany. The most predominant occupation of those newcomers was that of skilled weaver.
- In 2010, about 34.7 million U.S. residents claimed ancestors from Ireland. What were the most common Irish surnames of these folks? The last names of Murphy, Kelly, and O'Sullivan are considered the top three "most Irish." Other common Irish surnames include Walsh, O'Brien, Byrne, Ryan, O'Connor, O'Neill, and O'Reilly.
- Ireland has had its influence on geographical locations in the U.S. Seven communities are named Shamrock, including locations in Texas, Oklahoma, and West Virginia. Sixteen other towns are named Dublin, sharing the name with Ireland's capital. North Carolina is home to the community of Emerald Isle, population 3,655.
- Canada's longest-running parade is in the city of Montreal, where it first took place in 1824.
- St. Patrick's Day often brings beer and taverns to mind, but that tradition didn't start in Ireland. The Irish Parliament declared the day a religious holiday in 1903, meaning that all the pubs were closed. In 1970, that bill was overturned and the day became a national holiday rather than a religious observance.

Spread Literacy: Share Your Books

What do you do with all of the picture books spilling off your family-room bookshelves, or the already-read novels collecting dust in tall stacks next to your bedside lamp? Todd Bol has a suggestion. Relocate them to a Little Free Library that stands on a post in your front yard, a street corner or by a coffee shop, and let other book lovers enjoy your titles.

The "take a book, return a book" library is the nonprofit, grassroots concept that grew out of Todd's Hudson, Wis., home. When he built the simple freestanding library in his front yard in honor of his mom, neighbors passed by with excitement. "They hugged it like it was a new puppy on the block!" he said. The idea is spreading. With more than 4,000 registered libraries in front yards and public spaces in the U.S., Europe and beyond, the mission of the nonprofit is to promote literacy and the love of reading by building free book exchanges worldwide.

"The project is about building community, too," Todd said. Neighborhoods have created their own Facebook page where they organize events around their Little Free Library. From storytimes with kids to book reviews with adults, the little library is a happy gathering place for exchanging more than books.

Your family might wish to become volunteer stewards and build, decorate and maintain a small, friendly reading place where you live. Check out how to register, construct and promote one in your community at www.littlefreelibrary.org. Here are more ideas for sharing books:

--Browse through your bookshelves with people on your holiday gift list in mind. Attach a bookplate on the inside cover with a few comments about why you like the novel, biography or collection of poems. If you are passing the book on to your grandkids or adult children, include a memory of shared reading times.

--When throwing a birthday party for your young child, small books make a welcome addition to guest goodie bags.

--Do a twist on birthday gift-giving, like Jamie Hyman of Orlando, Fla., did when she turned 30. She made a list of her 30 favorite books, bought and wrapped them up with gift wrap, and enjoyed the pleasure of giving them away. Some were favorite children's books, which she gave to kids.

--Promote books you are reading with family, friends and co-workers with a simple tagline at the end of your emails. For example, under your signature, you might write, "I'm reading 'Cutting for Stone,' by Abraham Verghese."

Donna Erickson's award-winning series "Donna's Day" is airing on public television nationwide. To find more of her creative family recipes and activities, visit www.donnasday.com and link to the NEW Donna's Day Facebook fan page. Her latest book is "Donna Erickson's Fabulous Funstuff for Families."

GO FIGURE! by Linda Thistle

The idea of Go Figure is to arrive at the figures given at the bottom and right-hand columns of the diagram by following the arithmetic signs in the order they are given (that is, from left to right and top to bottom). Use only the numbers below the diagram to complete its blank squares and use each of the nine numbers only once.

VETERANS POST

by Freddy Groves

VA 'Walks the Walk' on Mental Health

In April 2012, the head of the Department of Veterans Affairs, Eric Shinseki, announced his intention to beef up the number of mental-health professionals at the VA. Specifically, it would hire 1,600 nurses, psychiatrists, psychologists, marriage counselors, family therapists, addiction therapists and social workers, along with 300 support personnel.

A few months later, President Obama signed an Executive Order instructing the VA to boost its mental health staff by 1,600, with 300 support personnel, by the end of June 2013.

At this point, the VA is well on its way, with 1,058 providers and 223 support personnel hired. In addition, and per the Executive Order, the VA has increased by 50 percent the call capacity of its crisis line.

One wonders, however, how an Executive Order comes into play here. Historically, these orders have been huge. Some have ordered wars, or integration of the military, or desegregation of schools, or Japanese-Americans to be forced into camps, or have allowed the National Security Agency to eavesdrop on phone calls without a warrant.

Using an Executive Order to instruct the VA about staffing levels, with specific numbers of personnel to hire, after the VA has already stated its intentions, is a bit curious.

Meanwhile, if you're a mental-health professional and want to work with the VA, go online to www.vacareers.va.gov and www.usajobs.gov.

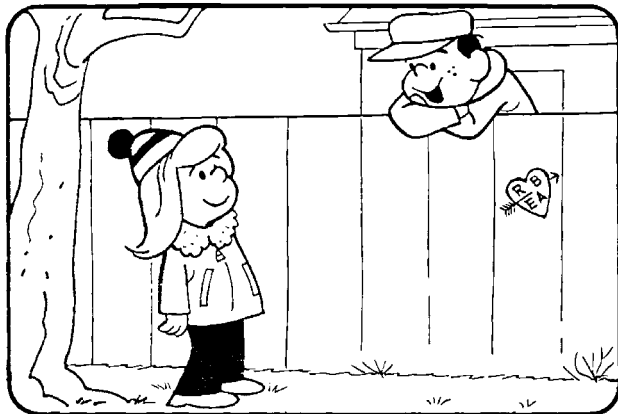

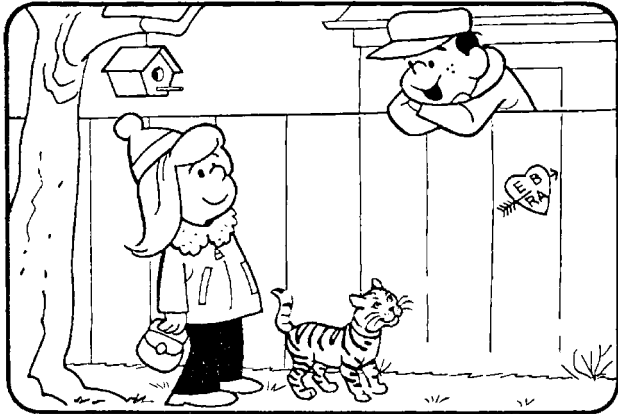

If you're a veteran and need help, call the nearest VA facility or go online to www.va.gov. If you have a mental health emergency, whether you're a veteran or family/friend of a veteran, call the crisis line (1-800-273-8255, press 1). You can do an online chat as well at www.veteranscrisisline.net or text to 838255.

Just so you know, most of the people on the other end of the phone at the crisis line are veterans, too.

Write to Freddy Groves in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475, or send e-mail to columnreply@gmail.com.

The tradition of a St. Patrick's Day parade began in America, not Ireland. New York City was home to the first parade, held on March 17, 1762. Irish soldiers serving in the British army organized the celebration to honor the Catholic feast day of Ireland's patron saint. Today, New York's parade is the largest in the world with more than 200,000 marchers along the Fifth Avenue route. Close to three million spectators observe the parade, which does not allow automobiles or floats.

Have you ever heard of the trifolium dubium? That's the name given to the shamrock by botanists. The early Celts referred to the shamrock as the seamroy, and considered this three-leafed clover a sacred plant with mystical properties. Legend has it that St. Patrick used the shamrock to explain the Holy Trinity to first-century Irish pagans. During the 17th century when the English began seizing Irish land and prohibiting the use of their native language and Catholic religion, many Irish started wearing the shamrock as a symbol of pride in their heritage.

The Irish word lobaircin means "small-bodied fellow," and has been modified a bit to the English word "leprechaun." These little imps date back to the early Celtic beliefs in fairies, those tiny men and women with magical powers, who used those powers for either good or evil. Leprechauns were seen as grumpy little men, whose duties were to mend the shoes of the other fairies. We've all heard of the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. Folklore claims that the little men have great treasures stored in crocks, and use trickery to protect it from others. If a leprechaun is captured by a human, he has the magical power to grant three wishes in exchange for his release. In 1959, Walt Disney Studios released the film Darby O'Gill and the Little People, which gave us the image of cheerful and friendly leprechauns, but in Irish folklore, they are cantankerous and mischievous.

Strange BUT TRUE

It was screenwriter, playwright, novelist, director and producer Ben Hecht who made the following sage observation: "Trying to determine what is going on in the world by reading newspapers is like trying to tell the time by watching the second hand of a clock."

Those who study such things say that the Earth spins faster on its axis in September than it does in March.

When the TV show "Bewitched" first started filming, the star, Elizabeth Montgomery, was just a month away from giving birth to her first child, so the first five episodes were shot almost in their entirety without her. It wasn't until the baby was a few weeks old that she was able to go on the set to film her scenes.

If you're a fan of the Beatles, you probably won't be surprised to learn that during the decade of the 1960s, they had more top 10 hits and more No. 1 records than any other recording artist.

Before the June 1944 invasion of Normandy, a crossword puzzle that was printed in the London Daily Telegraph contained the words "mulberry," "Neptune," "Omaha," "overlord" and "Utah." That may not seem to be a fact of much interest, but it turns out that those were all secret code words used by the Allied military in planning the upcoming offensive. The puzzle's author, a schoolteacher, was tracked down and interrogated, but the puzzle's content was ultimately chalked up to coincidence.

The country's first pay phone was installed in a bank in Hartford, Conn., in 1889. It cost 5 cents to place a call, the equivalent of $1.25 today.

Thought for the Day: "Whoever is careless with the truth in small matters cannot be trusted with important matters."

- Shirley was the top box-office draw for a four-year period, 1935 through 1938, saved 20th Century-Fox from bankruptcy, and had her own personal bodyguard.
- Following the huge success of Heidi, Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, and The Little Princess, Shirley performed in her last film as a child actress in 1940 at age 12. The film was The Blue Bird and was her 44th movie. Her popularity declined as she entered adolescence, and she made just a few films as a teen and young adult. When she was 15, Shirley met an Army Air Corps sergeant named John Agar, and at age 17, she married him. Their daughter was born when Shirley was 19, but the marriage was over after four years.
- December, 1950 was the time of two momentous occasions in Shirley's life – she announced her retirement from the film industry at age 22, and she married wealthy California businessman Charles Black. This union would endure 54 years until his death. She entered the political arena in 1969, when Richard Nixon appointed her as the U.S. Representative to the United Nations. Under Gerald Ford, Shirley served as Ambassador to Ghana and White House Chief of Protocol. Her assignment under Ronald Reagan was that of a foreign affairs officer with the State Department. During the George H.W. Bush administration, she was the Ambassador to Czechoslovakia. She became a best-selling author in 1988 with the release of her autobiography Child Star.

SHORT STUFF

This week there's no shortage of short things! Take a look at a number of items containing the word "short."

- Randy Newman's 1977 Billboard top hit "Short People" described his subject, "They got little baby legs that stand so low, you got to pick 'em up just to say hello." Who is classified as a short person? The term "short stature" refers to any person substantially under the average height for a person of the same age and gender. Pediatricians use a measurement called standard deviation that compares the height of different children. A child's height must be more than two SD's below average height in order to have short stature, and 95% percent of comparable children are taller.

Moments in time
THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On March 17, 1762, in New York City, the first parade honoring the feast day of St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, is held by Irish soldiers serving in the British army. Early Irish settlers to the American colonies, many of whom were indentured servants, brought the Irish tradition of celebrating St. Patrick's feast day to America.
- On March 11, 1818, "Frankenstein: or, The Modern Prometheus," is published. The book, by 21-year-old Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, is frequently called the world's first science-fiction novel.
- On March 12, 1933, eight days after his inauguration, President Franklin D. Roosevelt gives his first national radio address, or "fireside chat," broadcast from the White House. Roosevelt made sure each address was understandable to ordinary Americans.
- On March 13, 1944, Britain announces that all travel between Ireland and the United Kingdom is suspended, the result of the Irish government's refusal to expel Axis-power diplomats within its borders. Ireland stood its ground.
- On March 14, 1950, the Federal Bureau of Investigation institutes the "Ten Most Wanted" list in an effort to publicize particularly dangerous fugitives. The creation of the program arose out of a news story in 1949 about the "toughest guys" the FBI wanted to capture.
- On March 15, 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson addressed a joint session of Congress to urge the passage of legislation guaranteeing voting rights for all. On Aug. 6, 1965, Johnson signed the Voting Rights Act.
- On March 15, 1972, "The Godfather" -- a three-hour epic chronicling the lives of the Corleones, an Italian-American crime family led by the powerful Vito Corleone -- is released in theaters. "The Godfather" was adapted from the best-selling book of the same name by Mario Puzo.
- On March 16, 1985, in Beirut, Lebanon, Islamic militants kidnap American journalist Terry Anderson. On Dec. 4, 1991, Anderson's captors finally released him after 2,455 days. Anderson spent his entire captivity blindfolded.

The Right Way to Greet a Dog

By Samantha Mazzotta

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I met my neighbor coming up the walk with her dog this morning. When I reached out to pet "Sassy," she growled and nipped at me. My neighbor apologized and explained that Sassy cannot see well. I'm not sure that's a good enough answer. She should have better trained her dog to respond in a friendly way to people. Don't you agree? -- Stung in San Antonio

DEAR STUNG: No, I don't agree. Dogs with vision or hearing problems can be startled easily, and often react instinctively with a warning growl and even a nip. Even if you know a dog well, when you meet, always greet the owner first, keeping your hands in a relaxed position by your side. If you want to pet the dog, ask the owner if it's OK to do so. If the owner tells you to go ahead, call the dog's name first to get its attention, then slowly present the back of your hand and let the dog sniff it. If the dog stays calm, gently scratch along its jawline and behind the ears. Don't pat the dog on the top of the head, which can be seen as threatening. Owners should keep their dogs leashed at all times during walks. If someone asks to pet your dog, you can say no -- you don't have to explain why.

There's a growing movement to attach yellow ribbons to a dog's leash to indicate to others that a dog needs space. YellowDog, which started in Sweden, now has a U.S. branch. You can find YellowDogUSA on Facebook. Another good resource is DINOS (Dogs In Need of Space), which gives more details on what kinds of dogs need a wide berth, how to approach dogs and so on.

ARE YOU CARING FOR AGING OR DISABLED LOVED ONES AT HOME?
Are you Frazzled? Frustrated? Burned Out? At your Wits End!

Many of us face that question, for ourselves or for those we love. There are solutions other than a nursing home or assisted living facility. There are many fine and safe facilities, but regardless of their level of service, they often cause stress, hurt feelings and are very expensive.

When elderly or partially disabled people are able to remain in their homes, everyone wins. But, unlike 50 years ago, most families are not able to provide constant, vigilant 24 X 7 assistance to family members in need. Families are now scattered across the country, sometimes across the world. How can they provide adequate care, shopping trips, doctor visits, transportation to church and all the little things that make up life? It is impossible when they are miles, or hours away.

Is a Nursing Home the only Solution? The answer is a resounding NO! Today the need is recognized and the solution is available. Home Care may provide the answer that you need. Whether it is only a daily stop to verify meds are taken or a safe driver to take someone to an appointment, then low cost help is as close as your phone. Contact the Senior Center, ask your friends, or search the web. You will find well-trained and loving people who are willing to lend a caring hand.

You can have help without draining your bank account. Even daily help costs only a fraction of Assisted Living or Nursing Home expenses. You, and especially your loved one can keep their dignity, their home, their neighbors and best of all, their happiness. Don't feel pressured. Feeling helpless is not being hopeless.

You will be providing for your loved one in the best way possible, by finding assistance for the one you love, by providing help from people who get their joy by helping you to take care of your loved one and giving yourself the relief to refresh and provide the loving care that you really want to give.

Providing the right care for your parent, spouse, child or loved one is Love in Action. Remember, you don't need to do it all yourself!

- Do you know the difference between IRS forms 1040A and 1040EZ? Form 1040A is the "short form" while 1040EZ is the "easy" form, the simplest way to file taxes. Both are limited to taxpayers with less than $100,000 in taxable income who take the standard deduction. However, the easy form is only for those with no dependents.
- A short sale on the stock exchange means that the seller does not actually own the shares he/she is selling and has to borrow them before being able to deliver. When the share price falls, the short seller buys them and returns them to the lender, resulting in a gain on the deal.
- If someone calls you short, he/she might be referring to your height, but could be telling you that your demeanor is abrupt, discourteous, or unfriendly. A short presentation doesn't always refer to its duration. It might mean it was succinct and concise.
- If you want to retain information in your short-term memory, it will be necessary for you to repeat it out loud or mentally rehash it from time to time. By doing so, the data re-enters the memory's storage, enabling it to be preserved for a longer period.
- Look at all the idioms in the English language that contain the word "short." You can make short work of something by finishing it quickly. You might run short (not have enough), fall short (fail to measure up to a certain standard), or cut short (interrupt someone). If you've submitted your resume for a job, you might be on the short list, one that contains those narrowed down from the full pool of applicants. Hopefully, on that resume, you didn't sell yourself short, that is, didn't give yourself full credit where it was deserved. You certainly wouldn't want to get the short end of the stick, which might mean unfair treatment or not getting what you are worthy of.
- If you want to retain information in your short-term memory, it will be necessary for you to repeat it out loud or mentally rehash it from time to time. By doing so, the data re-enters the memory's storage, enabling it to be preserved for a longer period.
- What in the world is hydrogenated vegetable oil? Just a fancy name for shortening! Hydrogenation involves adding extra hydrogen atoms to vegetable fats, which turns them into solids. Shortening is 100% fat, compared to the 80% fat content of butter and margarine. Procter & Gamble introduced Crisco, an abbreviation of "crystallized cottonseed oil" in June of 1911.
- It's as easy as 1-2-3! Making shortbread, that is. The traditional recipe calls for one part sugar, two parts butter, and three parts flour. This little treat originated in Scotland during medieval times, when the word "short" was used to describe all things crisp and crumbly. Shortcake is not the same as shortbread. It uses vegetable fat rather than butter and adds some leavening agent such as baking powder, resulting in a different texture.
